This PhD thesis, like most research work, is the result of a curious and inquisitive spirit, coupled with plenty of hard work and persistence. Naturally, it was difficult at times, but overall, the fulfilling moments far exceeded the hardship – and I owe that to a world of people, to whom I will always be grateful ...

Firstly, I have to acknowledge the “Fundação para a Ciência e a Tecnologia” (SFRH/BD/4902/2001), who gave me the necessary financial support to accomplish this task.

Secondly, I want to express my gratitude to Prof. Maria Teresa Dinis and Doctor Luís Conceição, who supported me so enthusiastically from the start, when I first went to them with my project. They directed me to my other supervisor and co-supervisor, Prof. Ivar Rønnestad and Doctor William Koven, to whom I am extremely grateful for their important role in these last 4 years. All of you have been exceptionally supportive and helped me keeping my focus and motivation, either from far away or “in loco”. To Luís Conceição I owe a special word of thanks for always being there, never being too busy and to encourage me to go where it was necessary to do the work in the best possible conditions. The back-up of a good supervisor makes all the difference in the hard times ... and in that respect I feel that I was very fortunate, both for the quality and the unusual quantity of supervisors!

I was also privileged to cooperate with Doctor José Luís Zambonino and Doctor Chantal Cahu (IFREMER-Brest, France), as well as with Doctor Patrick Babin (GPP, University of Bordeaux, France), to whom I am very grateful for making me feel so welcomed in their labs and for giving me the necessary scientific and technical support to do the work I had set to do. The stay at IFREMER-Brest benefited from funding by the European Commission (ASEFAF, EEC HPRI - CT - 2001 – 0014; IFREMER ref. No. 01/1214121/TF), which I acknowledge. Jean Robin, Hervé Le Delliou and especially Magali Hervy, Patrick Quazuguel and Marie Le Gall were an essential part of both the professional and personal success of my short stay in Brest, just as Michèle André and Christophe Barthe, were at GPP, University of Bordeaux ... Thank you so much for all your help, for teaching me what you know so well and for all the nice conversations during tea and lunch time! I really learned a lot, in a very relaxed and friendly work environment, and that was all thanks to you.

And talking about technical support and learning a great deal from others, other names come to my mind ... Carlos Rojas-Garcia (at the University of Bergen, Norway), Oryia Nixon, Sigal Lutzky and Michal Torten (at IOLR, Eilat, Israel). Thank you so much for all your help and it was a real pleasure working with you.

Close to the end of my PhD, Doctors Marisol Izquierdo and Maria José Caballero were kind enough to do some chemical and histological analysis for me in their lab, for which I am very grateful. Our email contact and “conversations” were also much appreciated.

In my “home University”, the University of Algarve, I counted with indispensable and precious assistance from all the “Aquagroup”. Helena Teixeira and Helena Damásio, thank you for taking so well care of my Sole larvae until the “right” age and for your help afterwards. In addition, I am grateful to many others for their direct (giving me a hand with the fish or in the lab from time to time, taking care of my experiments in occasional weekends) but also for their indirect support (basically just making it so nice to work!) – Marc Lacuisse, Rui Rocha, Sofia Engrola, Cláudia Aragão, Florbela Soares, Beatriz and, in special, Laura Ribeiro, for teaching me the enzymatic analysis with such detail and good mood. I cannot forget João Sendão ... thanks for your help in the workshop.

And because life does not revolve around work only, I have to say some words to everyone that made these 4 years a wonderful and unforgettable human experience. Learning about the “mysterious world of fish larvae” was very important and fulfilling but not what I valued and cherished the most in these last 4 years - and that was thanks to you! I made such good friends, the kind that last forever, in spite of the little time we spent together, and I consider myself extremely fortunate for that. I shared a lot of nice evenings and weekends with many friends from all over the world ... together we visited beautiful places or simply enjoyed our free time together. Getting to know you was a privilege and I am grateful to you for making time pass so quickly and pleasantly, letting me forget the worries from work and that particular experiment that was going so badly! A very special thank you to the “Norwegian crew” - Scott, Sally, Virginia, Silvia, Moncho, Emílio and Davide -, to the “Israeli crew” - Nitzan and Tomer (and their beautiful daughter Soof), Orit, Gilad, Yosi, Omer and Sharon, and to the “French crew” (which are actually all Spanish!!!) - Enric, Maria Dolores, Maria José, Maria, Iñigo, Manu, ... (just to mention a few from the “Maison International” who never allowed me to feel bored or lonely).

As for all my “old” best friends, the ones who were always there, no matter the distance, I almost have no words ... fortunately (or not, the future will tell!), you all went or are going through the same experience as me, so I don’t have to tell you how important and vital “old friends” are for our psychological and emotional stability when we are so far from home... and, again, I consider myself so, so, lucky for having you as friends. The geographical barriers were unnoticed and you were always present when I needed the most. There are really too many to single out (but you all know who you are!), so I will just say “obrigada” to all and especially to those whose visits (in too many cases they were only “prospect visits” but it was still a nice thought!), emails, phone conversations, msn chats, etc, made all the difference – Sheila, Sofia, Maria João, Aninhas, Luíças (Chaves and Camacho), Luís, Ricardo, Cris, ... , et al.!

As usually in these cases, we leave the best to the end... my FAMILY (and the capital letters are not unintentional) – my mother, “fathers”, my brother Miguel and my grandparents. To you I do not express gratitude only for the support during this PhD but for everything that made me the person who I am today. To my grandparents Jacinto and Morais, for being proud of me, even if I did not become a well known and successful medical doctor, as they have dreamed of! Thank you all so much for the Sunday phone calls and for always showing in many ways your love for me.

To Zé Luís and my mother ... this thesis is dedicated to you – for all of the above and much, much more. If there are feelings that can only be understated with words, this is definitely one of them. I could not expect more or be more grateful to anyone. You have always been there for me, either at a distance or visiting every time you could, and always did your best to make my life run as “smoothly” and happily as possible. I know how proud you are of me and let me just say that I am equally proud of having such great parents and, above all, best friends. My accomplishments in life reflect all of this! Thank You!
